Course Description:

The weekly iPhD Seminar, chaired by Professor Eric S. Lin and managed by International Intercollegiate Ph.D. Program at National Tsing Hua University, informs the iPhD community about a wide range of global and domestic issues and perspectives as well as state-of-art knowledge. This seminar course is required and designed for the students of Intercollegiate Ph.D. Program. We target on offering interdisciplinary background and knowledge through this seminar course. We welcome all visitors to our seminar sessions. If you are a registered Tsing Hua student in International Intercollegiate Ph.D. Program, you may take this seminar series for university credit.

The students who take this iPhD Seminar have to attend scheduled speeches and have to hand in the short essays each time. This course also requires students to come back to NTHU main campus for intensive talks. The schedule will be informed soon.

Requirement:

To take the Seminar Series for University Credit you must register for the course (IPHD 7002). There are no prerequisites. Enrollment is only open to the students of International Intercollegiate PhD Program at National Tsing Hua University.

Grading Policy: The grading policy that counts toward the final grade is as follows.

Attendance & Essay (★)	80%
Presentation (★★)	10%
Participation (★★★)	10%

(★): It is required for credit-taking students to show up. Without show-up on time, the student is considered as being absent. Handing a short essay is mandatory for each class attendance. A maximum of total 80 points is for the class attendance and essay.

(★★): 10 points are for students' oral presentation.

(★★★): 10 points are based on class discussion during Q&A after seminar talks.
